CAREER & MEMBERSHIPS

Work History:

- Founder and Director of ADS Ventures, Inc., a government relations firm specializing in environmental technologies.
- Former U.S. Representative from Massachusetts 5th District (D-Massachusetts, 1985-1993), with service on Appropriations, Budget, Foreign Affairs, and Ethics Committees.
- He served as a Massachusetts Democratic state chair, a member of the Massachusetts state senate (1972-84), and member of the Massachusetts state house of representatives (1970-72). Unsuccessful candidate for renomination in 1992 to the One Hundred Third Congress.
- Founder and co-director of the Institute on State and Local Government at Brandeis University, has served as a guest lecturer at Harvard University's Kennedy Institute for Politics and in 1975 taught a course in urban politics at Boston University.

Memberships:

- Trustee, Second Nature. Founded in 1993, Second Nature is an educational nonprofit whose primary goal is to advance human and ecological well-being. It works specifically with colleges and universities by helping them transform into institutions that teach and practice the concept of sustainability. They recognize the critical role that higher education institutions play in creating a sustainable future. Not only do colleges and universities train future leaders, they are intellectual leaders and often influential institutions in local economies. As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, Second Nature depends on financial and in-kind support from foundations, corporations and individual contributors. It seeks support from a broad range of individuals and organizations.
- Trustee, Earthwatch Institute. The mission of the Earthwatch Institute is to promote sustainable conservation of our natural resources and cultural heritage by creating partnerships between scientists, educators and the general public.
- Board member, Center for Justice & Accountability
- Trustee, Cambridge College
- Board member, Alliance To End Childhood Lead Poisoning

- Advisory board member, Walden Woods Project. The Walden Woods Project is dedicated to preserving endangered sites within the Walden Woods ecosystem and to educating people on land-preservation issues.
- ADS Ventures is a contributor to International Institute of Boston
- ADS Ventures is a contributor to Young Audiences of Massachusetts

Foundation

The Henry Hornblower Fund, Inc., of Boston, MA. This must be his great-grandfather, who died in 1941 and whose law firm was the donor. It is interesting that the president of the Fund is Nathan Withington, Chet's mother's maiden name. He must be some relation to Chet. Note that Henry Hornblower married Hattied Frances Wood and had a daughter, Ruth Hornblower. Ruth Hornblower's first marriage was to an Atkins and produced five children. Ruth Hornblower's second marriage was to Chester Noyes Greenough and produced no children. One of Ruth's children was Henry Hornblower Atkins, who married Karkilie Withington – Chet's parents. He was named Chester Greenough, obviously after his father's stepfather.

- Henry Hornblower Fund Inc.

P.O. Box 2365

Boston, MA 02107-2365

Contact: Nathan N. Withington - Pres.

Type of foundation: Independent

Fiscal Date: 12/31/00

Assets: $5,896,000

Total Giving: $299,206

Emphasis on higher and secondary education, hospitals and cultural programs. Giving is primarily in Massachusetts.

Other:

- Author of "Getting Elected: A Guide To Winning State And Local Office" (Houghton Mifflin, 1973)
- In 1999, attended Cuba Conference in Cienfuegos: Cuban botanists and historians avidly exchanged information with their U.S. academic counterparts in a two-day conference organized by Harvard's David Rockefeller Center for Latin American Studies (DRCLAS) and the Cienfuegos Botanical Garden (until 1961, the Harvard Botanical Garden).
- Unitarian
- Elected a Massachusetts state representative in 1970 at age 22; he started his campaign while still an Antioch student and several fellow students worked on his campaign. He earned two quarters of co-op credit.
- Has been a strong supporter of co-op education and believes that all students should have access to higher education at private liberal arts colleges.
- In 1979 he chaired the Boston phase of the $16 million capital campaign.
- He was written up in the President's Note of Historic Preservation Magazine (1990) for his work in helping to preserve Walden Woods and the Massachusetts mill towns of Lawrence and Lowell.

- Special interests include bird-watching, squash, hiking, cross-country skiing, jogging, archives and historical records.

Cultivation:

5/8/02: Note from Sherwood Guernsey: "Some time ago, I submitted Frances Bond as a candidate for Board of Trustee member. I am very pleased to provide a summary statement of why she would be a superb member of the Board. Had I known you wanted this statement, I would have done so much earlier so as to expedite her consideration. I will not simply repeat her resume.

"I have known Frances for over seven years, and I can highly recommend her. She has all the basic characteristics for board membership: competence, caring with unquestionable character, vast experience, good judgment, clear thinking, serious intellect, desire to serve on the Antioch Board, and a very impressive drive to make a difference for others.

But I want to emphasize her special aptitudes for the Antioch Board:

1. Academic background: A university board needs depth of membership from the very field of endeavor which it oversees: education, particularly higher education. Frances brings a lifetime of experience in both administration and teaching in the university setting. She knows well the issues and problems faced by the Board from both perspectives. She knows the proper division of responsibilities between Board and administration. She knows and has dealt with the academic, business and administrative matters of universities. She has "been there" and can speak eloquently to the problems and solutions that other universities have tried and with what success or failure. I have heard Barbara speak of the need for someone with this kind of experience.
2. Coop experience: While working at the Peace Corps, she worked with me as director of the Peace Corps fellows program. The focus of this program was to establish programs at various university graduate schools for Returning Peace Corps volunteers, in which the volunteers could continue with their formal education, while including a crucial component of community-based education/experience in the field in which they were studying, in the community in which the university was located. It was indeed, a co-op program ... in the spirit of the Antioch co-op program, and Frances loved the idea and promoted it wholeheartedly. She wants another opportunity to support this concept.
3. Fund-raising. Frances will not bring millions of dollars of personal wealth to the board table, but she does bring substantial and very successful experience in securing funds from foundations, as for example when she secured a multimillion dollar foundation grant for the Peace Corps Fellows Program. She might well be able to assist the University in this field of fund-raising.
4. Strategic thinking: I believe that the ability to think conceptually and strategically is key to Board membership. Frances brings this kind of thinking to the Board.
5. Diversity: With the recently announced retirement of a female Board member, my new membership, and the expected approval of two more new male members of the Board, the Board appears to be able to use some additional gender diversity, not to mention a strong Italian heritage.

6. Teamwork with independent thinking: The best approach to university issues, in addition to strategic thinking, is the ability to balance working with the other Board members, while being willing and able to set forth independent thinking in a cooperative and non-strident, cooperative manner. Frances has demonstrated that ability over and over to me.
7. Objectivity: Not everyone on the Board needs, or should be, a former student of one or another Antioch campuses. How refreshing to have a member of the Board who wants to assist the goals and missions of Antioch, as does Frances, without an "baggage" or preconceptions, and with wonderful experience to view our problems/opportunities.
8. Achievements: Her resume speaks to her many achievements in the university setting, in government – particularly the Peace Corps Fellows directorship and her position in the office of Secretary Riley, the then-US Secretary of Education position, and in her own writing and independent video production work: writing, producing and filming a whole series of videos on parenting/child education.
9. Dedication and hard work: I can absolutely assure you that Frances would be an unstinting Board member. Hard work is her stock in trade. She would read and digest all the material sent to her, and be prepared at all meetings. She would definitely not be an absentee-board member ... I am sure that you seek workers, not glory seekers, for the Board seats. Frances will not disappoint you.
10. Time and Desire: At this point in her career, she assures me that she can and would devote the necessary time to the position. The desire to serve is based on the excitement of advancing and growing the Antioch difference.
11. I hope this is helpful, Lois. There is much more I could say, and may well say at another time, but it is getting late, and I must close this for now. I would be pleased to answer any specific questions or concerns you may have. The university would be very well served by Frances Bond.
